

Judging Table

Criteria	Low -1	2	Medium - 3	4	High - 5
Problem Solved	Submission does not address a real problem.		Submission provides an enhancement to a problem that has already been at least partially addressed by IT.		Submission address key problem in the domain it addresses.
Innovation &amp; IT	Submission shows little creativity and understanding in applying IT to the problem space. Submission shows little to no knowledge of emerging technologies.		Submission shows a level of creativity and understanding that we would expect from a competent IT professional in applying IT to the problem space. Submission shows a fair amount of knowledge of emerging technologies, and is able to incorporate them into the solution		Submission shows surprising level of creativity and a thorough level of understanding in applying IT to the problem space. Submission shows a thorough level of knowledge of emerging technologies and seamlessly incorporates them into the solution.
Adoptability	For any number of reasons, the solution would seem to have a small chance of being adopted by the patient community.		The solution appears to have a good chance of being adopted by the patient community, but may require a strong marketing or education effort behind it to drive up adoption.		The solution appears to directly solve a problem in a way that our experience tells us should be popular and readily accepted by the patient community.
Security &amp; Privacy	Solution addresses no security/privacy issues making its implementation highly unlikely.		The submission takes into account a portion of the relevant security/privacy issues, but fails to address them all.		The submission appears to have addressed and provided an adequate solution to all relevant security/privacy issues.
Presentation	Presentation of solution is unorganized, inarticulate and uncreative.		Presentation of submission is somewhat organized, articulate and creative which adequately describes all aspects of the proposed solution.		Presentation of submission is delivered in an organized, articulate and creative fashion which thoroughly describes all aspects of the proposed solution.